As the principle of commutation takes into account only the life of the pensioner who is in enjoyment of the pension and not also the prospective benefits of reversioners, it would appear fair that it should be applied to life pensions only. As the present pension does not coupled with the restriction that it should cease with the life of the applicant, the question does not appear to

The recipient did not agree to the pension being capitalized and so the matter dropped. L

There is no question of applying Commuting Commutation to these pensions - The point raised here is - to Capitalize the small monthly payments of 0-7-6 etc. This is explained in the present column - But this is applicable L
